

A new couple visits our services. We will send a letter expressing our appreciation for their visit, but will they return?

A sick person is in the hospital. You appreciate a brief visit when you are hospitalized? Shouldn't you do it to others?

A new family moves into town. They are unacquainted with the town and have no friends here. If we visit them, perhaps they will come to services and learn the truth.

A member of the church loses a loved one. We usually are prompt to visit at the time of bereavement, but what about the long hours of loneliness and adjustment after the funeral, when all the relatives have gone home?

A member of the church begins to miss services. The occasional miss becomes a pattern, and he/she is seldom seen anymore. What might have happened if concerned Christians had made visits into that home? We expect our elders to shepherd the flock, but what are we doing to help?

A new convert is baptized and added to the family. We tell them how happy we are to have them as a new brother or sister, but do we continue to encourage them, teach them that this is a new beginning, not the end.

Is there a visit you need to make? Don't put it off! Reach out to the lost world around you.
