

The verse that we sing, "This world is not my home, I'm just a passing through" becomes more real to me every day. It seems to me that society continues to degenerate into sin, and it is a place I don't want to live in anymore. I thank God that He has promised us a better life beyond this one.

Our world has very few values. There is no such thing as right or wrong. Rather the world views ethical behavior as a matter of opinion. A common motto is that ethics are fie for the person holding them, but cannot be made into a societal standard by which everyone must live. The world majors in minors and minors in majors. The world's entertainment is laced with sin, selfishness, and greed. Parties to celebrate various milestones include revelry, drinking, carnality.

I'm getting tired of people who "know all the answers" but haven't the foggiest idea as to what the questions are. I'm getting very tired of our world that calls evil good, and good, evil. Try being opposed to drinking, fornication, homosexuality and you will be looked at as the one who is in the wrong. It is in style to be "politically correct" which means you can't correct anyone for their lifestyle or views. But one can offend God, because what He says doesn't count anyway.

I'm ready to go to heaven. The world has nothing to offer me that I am interested in. May we pray and encourage each other, for it seems that the works of evil men are proceeding from bad to worse (2Tim. 3:13).
